We're Bloody Essential

RETAIL AND FAST FOOD WORKERS UNION

Dignity at work includes being provided basic hygiene facilities. Toilet paper is essential and so are sanitary items like tampons and pads.
No one chooses to bleed – it's just a fact of life like going to the toilet.

Many workers in retail and fast food are young and can experience their first period at work. Many people have irregular menstrual cycles. Workers can start menstruating while on shift only becoming aware on a bathroom break. Retail and fast food workers are paid low wages and can't always afford essential items.

Providing sanitary items at work means we have access to pads and tampons when we need them. They're bloody essential.
We don't bring toilet paper with us to work. Work should provide pads and tampons.

Every day during the pandemic we have been told we're essential workers.
We're bloody essential and we the undersigned ask our employer to provide free pads and tampons in the workplace.

Store/Company: Location:

First Name	Last Name	Email	Phone	Signature

This document is the property of the Retail and Fast Food Workers Union Incorporated
Return to contact@raffwu.org.au or PO Box 334, Clifton Hill, VIC, 3068.
Signing this petition is participating in the lawful activity of RAFFWU.

Just like joining RAFFWU, signing this petition is protected by law.
Information you share on this form is stored and used in accordance with our Privacy Policy as varied from time to time which can be viewed here: https://raffwu.org.au/wp-content/uploads/2020/02/161107-Privacy-Statement.pdf

raffwu.org.au/werebloodyessential